

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Light is used for a high-speed spatial transmission of data between a transmitter and receiver provided near, but not in contact with, each other. The communication can be maintained even if at least one of the transmitter and receiver is rotated.